

Excerpt from Diary and Correspondence of Samuel Pepys, Esq., F. R. S, Vol. 8: From His Ms. Cypher in the Pepsyan Library; October 1, 1667 July 15, 1668 Oct. 1st, 1667. To White Hall, and there in the Boarded-gallery did hear the musick with which the King is presented this night by Monsieur Grebus the master of his musick; both instrumentall - I think twenty-four violins - and vocall; an English song upon Peace. But, God forgive me! I never was so little pleased with a concert of musick in my life. The manner of setting of words and repeating them out of order, and that with a number of voices, makes me sick, the whole design of vocall musick being lost by it. Here was a great press of people; but I did not see many pleased with it, only the instrumental musick he had brought by practice to play very just. 2nd. This morning came to me Mr. Gauden about business, with his gold chain about his neck, as being Sheriff of the City this year.
